Spa Radiance

by Carly LoJacono with Glodow Nead Communications

Spa Radiance, located in San Francisco's affluent Cow Hollow District, recently received a major makeover by local interior designer Jay Jeffers. The spa, known for attracting celebrity clientele, now resembles that of an elegant Parisian atelier with soft gray and blue tones, rustic French oak floors, and modern brass chandeliers. Jeffers calls his relaxed and elegant design "California clean meets Parisian chic," which offers a soothing atmosphere for client treatments and relaxation. This is the third renovation in 12 years that Jeffers Design Group has completed for Angelina Umansky, a fourth-generation aesthetician and co-owner of Spa Radiance. The design is exquisite and the products and service are top notch.

The signature treatment featured at Spa Radiance is the Super Duper Facial. This advanced treatment ventures beyond traditional cleansing, exfoliating, and toning and gets deep under the surface of the skin to leave clients feeling smooth, hydrated, and revitalized. First, the skin care professional creates a custom-blended skin peel, based on the client's complexion, to rid the surface of impurities. Then, a diamond microdermabrasion refines and rejuvenates the skin to prepare for extractions. Lastly, a customized calming mask is applied while the client is treated with medical-grade oxygen to nourish the skin. 75 minutes; $205
